

NEO GONIMISM MANIFESTO
SPECIAL
ON WAR

There's
no proof!

Lies!

All
lies!

But
there's not one bit of proof!

M...
Mr.
Koba-
yashi!

You fit
the profile.

But Poko-
Q

It's as clear as day.

Poko-
Q

So many witnesses
are angry.

So many witnesses
are crying.

Where's
the proof?

...that you can't
protest anymore!

The witnesses are describing their tales of tragedy and misery
with such intensity...

I wanna be seen as a good person!

I wanna be seen
as a good person sooo badly!

Tokura, who is a member of my staff, gave the 4-page booklet "Yamagata, who is a former member of the Self Defense Forces, meeting for me outside of the condominium where we work. He approached Yamagata and spoke with him directly. He even drew a composite sketch.

"What are you looking for?"

"What are you looking for?"

"They were waiting for me even in front of my house. I even have witnesses."

"Why is the group on the street?"

"I was being followed by all four Shinryu members from December 1st until before the Tokyo subway station attack."

"I was able to get them from the ship near my place of work and reflect them several times back."

"My secretary Katsunori gave them a suspicious look so they abandoned their plan and took off."

"They sat behind me at a coffee shop and were just about to spray me with the gas but..."

"I saw the confession statement myself."

"Yamagata confessed to the police and this was in the newspapers when it leaked out."

This is a nation ruled by law.

If there is no need for proof, any witness who is a good talker with acting skills can frame others.

It's left demand an apology or compensation without any proof.

There's no proof.

There's not a single drop of KQ gas.

There's no doctor's certificate because I said I actually been sprayed by it.

But a case for preparations for murder wasn't established.

No matter how clearly I testify, there are some who believe me and some who don't. But

This is something that anyone with common sense living in a nation ruled by law must be aware of.

They can change with time become distorted depending on how they are interpreted become exaggerated, and become nothing but fairy tales after being told so many times.

"Techniques include all kinds of assumptions, mistakes, whatever, lies, etc."

I went through the issue of comfort women thoroughly in "Neo Gomanism Manifesto" Volumes 3 and 4 and settled it logically...

But I'll go through it here briefly just for your sake.

The media is prioritizing its "wartime comfort women" stories with deep sympathy as usual. They establish the stories as accomplished facts by feeding them to us in large quantities even if there is no proof.

On August 16th of 1992, Prime Koizumi, then the Chief Cabinet Secretary of the time, issued a statement that apologized for "forced transferring" of the women for prostitution and made an apology.

But former Chief Cabinet Secretary Nobuo Ishihara, who was involved with the formulation of the statement, stated in 1997 that it was a product of a special diplomacy with South Korea that was conducted with no evidence whatsoever. Koizumi himself even admitted this fact.

This so-called "wartime comfort women issue" is about the Japanese military forcing down women from areas such as Korea, forcefully sending them all to become sex slaves, and systematically raping them.

But that's all a pack of lies and there's not one bit of evidence that proves it.

The term "Agung Lady" (wartime comfort women) was coined by the author Kaku Shiroki in 1973.

During the war, they were called "wartime comfort women", "military comfort women", or just simply "comfort women".

These said some people who visit.

forcibly transferred
by the Japanese government to become a sex slave

They were voluntary prostitutes or women who had no choice but to become prostitutes that served to Japanese soldiers.

This report was based on the statement made by Jiro Yoshida, who was the only Japanese that showed I showed these women.
But Yoshida himself admitted in 1994 that his statement was false.

The idea held by this one man was transmitted to Asians, Koreans and other Japanese made: South Korea and then the United Nations – to become another lie in the list of false accusations against Japan.

The "Comfortwomen Report" which was submitted to the UN Commission on Human Rights, states that there was a forced transfer of comfort
women and demands
the punishing of those involved along with not oral orders from the Japanese government.

That document
isn't a document.

No matter what kind of transferring it was, they were "forced".

It was right.

They were "forced".

They didn't do it, even they wanted
to.

Maybe even prostitute?

Saying that like this means to say like these from the left.

Asian Women and other works, left-winged "victim" groups, and progressive people who had been making a big fuss over the "people-hunting and forced transfer theory" said that all evidence indicated to the "did you know there was a case of force, right?" argument as much as they found out that Jiro Yoshida was an outright liar and that there was not one bit of evidence that proved "people-hunting and forced transfer".

But these views arose in order to turn the focus away from the people-hunting and kidnapping argument as a variation of the "forced theory" fabricated by a scholar named Fushiko Yoshida in 1997 because all of the "forced transfer theories became involved

But it is being too singular to blame it all on the Japanese military just because there were people who suffered

These were cases where the women made considerable savings at the military brothels and built homes in their hometowns...

...and there were cases where the Japanese military stopped dishonest traders from ripping them off, to name a few.

Of course there were those who had no choice but to live in a world of misery...

...sold off as glaze by impoverished parents...

...and many who were shipped off to military brothels by traders to work.

You can't help but feel sympathy for them.

Overseas, it is widely being said that "Koreans were forced slaves and raped" and it is left at that, without any evidence being made...

And here in Japan, it is being said that they were forced.

But it is the era when neither the concept of "human rights" nor the concept of "feminism" existed that is to blame.

And it is the poverty that left parents with no choice but to sell off their children to far away places in order to get food on the table because the Korean Peninsula wasn't modernized yet that is to blame.

It is not the fault of the Japanese military that these women had to face difficult times.

You can say that these parents are to blame.

You can even say that the traders are to blame.

Testimonies that didn't exist back then are being given now.

...including the comfort women in South Korea's 1980s and Japanese Imperial Army's 1930s articles...

Testimonies that were extracted from comfort women span many time periods...

"Testimonies"...

The testimonies of comfort women that are now heard right after the war...

They didn't just start asserting themselves on their own reality

...all because of Sajo Yoshiko's made-up story in 1982

...gathering comfort women from mainland Asia after that...

Those who only want to be seen as good people don't have the courage to show skepticism toward such "testimonies"

may i speak out subjectively?

They use testimonies that stir people's hearts because they conflict with today's values such as human rights, feminism, and antiracism.
